

June: Men's Health

Prostate cancer is one of the most common types in men. When detected early and still confined to the prostate gland, it has a better chance of successful treatment. If you are 50 years of age or older, you should be screened by your doctor. If you are 40 years of age or older, and considered high risk (those with a first-degree relative who had prostate cancer), you should also be screened by your doctor. Steps toward prevention include replacing animal-based fats with plant-based fats, eating foods high in lycopene and exercising.
